

July 13, 2020

So, I am not sure what to say today as things are not so good again, especially if you live in Florida, Texas, and California, among other places. I do not want to add to the tensions, but I cannot pretend that we are not collectively facing a future that will be without challenges and obstacles.

I am back to where I was last March, finding it difficult to read and think calmly and getting words together to share with you today.

Peace be with you!